[For the Dispatch.]

Weevilla Wheat. Messrs. Editors: A correspondent some days since made inquiries through your paper concerning weevil in wheat. While I cannot answer all his questions. I may be able to offer some practical suggestions on the subject. The erg of this insect (Calandria Granaria) is deposited in the wheat after it is threshed and carried to the granary. The fact that covering the wheat well with chaff will generally, if not always, keep the grain clear of weevil seems to confirm this. This is one practical remedy or preventive. Another, which has been tried with good effect, is to smear boards about the granary with pitch, and repeat the operation from time to time. Another thing, which is said to aid very much in getting rid of the insect after it has gotten in the wheat, is to heap it up into small conical piles, which causes the weevil to rise to the top, where they may be mashed between boards or knocked down with bags and killed.

It is said also that plants of the Henbane (Sframonium) placed within the bulk of wheat will drive them out. The Agricultural Society of Meaux, in France, advised to soak cloths of flax in water. Wring out the water over the piles of wheat after the weevil had gotten in it, and that it be suffered to remain two hours. In that time large quantities of the insect will be found adhering to the cloths, which must be quickly removed and immersed in tubs of water. Another remedy is to subject the wheat to moderate heat in kilns, and no doubt this is effectual, though very troubledoubt this is effectual, though very troublesome. It is probable that sulphur burned in considerable amount in granaries tightly closed would destroy these insects, previously stirring up and spreading out the wheat on the floor. The burning sulphur liberates "sulphurous acid gas," which is very destructive to insect life. We all who were raised on farms remember how bees in hives, in "old times," previous to taking the honey, were killed by burning sulphur under the hives. Very respectfully, TH. POLLARD,

Commissioner Agriculture. [For the Dispatch.]

I saw in the Dispatch a few days ago an inquiry as to whether there was anywhere a dissertation on the grain-weevil, "or words to that effect."

I intended at the time I saw the inquiry, but forgot it, to say that the late Edmund Ruffin published an "Essay on the Propagation and Habits of the Moth-Weevil; and Means Suggested to Prevent its Ravnges," in the Farmers' Register for 1833; and republished it in his work, Essays and Notes on Agriculture-1855. J. W. Randolph published the latter work, and may tell how to procure it. The Farmers' Register is in the State Library. F. G. R.

Christ's Second Coming. A GREAT COUNCIL OF PROTESTANTS TO DISCUSS

THE SUBJECT IN NEW YORK. A New York paper of Tuesday says:

There was last evening a well-attended meeting, both of laymen and ministers of all Protestant denominations, in the chapel of the Church of the Holy Trinity to make preparations for the great conference to be opened in this city next month to discuss the question of the second coming of Christ. The Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., presided. The meeting was opened with prayer, and the hymn "When Jesus Comes." Then, at the suggestion of the Chairman, most of those present repeated a scriptural text referring to the expected coming of Christ. Dr. Tyng said that last June there was a meeting of believers at Clifton Springs, at which it was resolved to call a conference similar to one which lately met in England to discuss the question of the Lord's coming. The call was drawn up, and signed by more than two hundred of the most popular clergymen and laymen of the country. Letters had been received from many of the large cities, including Chicago, begging that the meeting might convene there; but it had been decided to hold it in the Church of the Holy Trinity, New York, on October 30th and 31st, and November 1st. Mr. Moody, Dr. Tyngsaid, would probably be there, and many other skilled evangelists. He was sure the Conference would be very largely attended from all parts of this country, and many distinguished English clergymen had been invited, and would be likely to attend. He hoped to see even the Rev. Dr. H. Bonar.

The Rev. Drs. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., and J. D. Herr, and the Rev. Dr. Gillespie were appointed to nominate sub-committees of arrangements, and, before closing, Dr. Typg, in reply to a question, said he was firmly convinced that the Lord Jesus Christ would veritably come again to this world to take His Church and establish His Kingdom upon earth.

The prompt reform of those bodily evils enfected direction, incomplete assimilation, inactivity of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, as well as of the nervous symptoms which these aliments are especially proxet to beget, is always accomplished by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine accredited by physicians, pronounced pure by analysis, and eminently wholesome and agreeable.
